

CONGRESS CONVENES.

Debate On the Currency Bill Resumed.
Its Fate Uncertain.

AN EX-SENATOR'S VIEWS.

Substitute Measure to Be Introduced.
Appropriation Bills to Be Presented in a Short Time—Sugar Importers Confer With Secretary Carlisle—Secretary Morton's View of the Distress in Nebraska.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Congress reconvened today. The fate of the currency bill, debate on which was resumed today, was generally discussed. There is a prevailing impression that a Democratic caucus will be held, probably tonight, to consider the measure, but no official action looking to that end has been taken as yet. It was the purpose of the Democratic leaders before the holiday recess to bring the bill to a final vote on Monday, but this is now unlikely.

Chairman Sayres of the appropriation committee expects to have the district appropriation bill ready by Saturday, and the sundry civil bill completed about the middle of next week.

Mr. Sperry, a Democratic member of the banking committee, who has taken a great interest in the currency bill, has prepared a substitute for it providing for the funding of the greenbacks with a 3-per-cent gold bond. His substitute, it is understood, was submitted to Secretary Carlisle and by the latter laid before the president.

Farwell's Plan.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Ex-Senator Farwell of Illinois has written to Chairman Springer, of the currency committee, saying:

"I have yours of the 29th. I did not expect you would publish either of the letters which you acknowledged receipt of, but you can do so if you wish. I wish to say to you now what possibly I have said before, that there is just one thing to do to settle this whole financial muddle which we seem to be in and the are the following three propositions:

"1. Let the government fund its floating debt and refund its bonded debt in 2 per cent 50-year bonds and retire from the currency business altogether.
"2. Allow the national banks to use these bonds at par as a basis for their circulation, exempting them from all federal taxation except just enough to pay for printing their notes.
"3. Repeal the subtreasury act and let the revenues of the nation be deposited in the national banks where collected.

"Congress may discuss this question for the next six years but will finally adopt the above propositions because they are the only ones that will accomplish the desired end."

Government Revenues.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The monthly statement of the receipts and expenditures of the United States shows receipts during December amounting to $21,866,136; disbursements $27,135,460, leaving a deficit of $5,269,324 and for the six months of the present fiscal year $37,564,465. The receipts from customs were $11,203,049 against $10,260,692 for the month of November; from internal revenue $9,394,039 against $7,774,704 for November. The receipts from customs during the last six months were $69,664,330 or only about $161,000 less than for the first half of last year. The receipts from internal revenue during the last six months were $51,160,782 or $3,201,276 in excess of the first half of the last fiscal year.

Distress in Nebraska.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Secretary Morton, who is a Nebraska man, does not believe that the distress in his own and adjoining states amounts to a famine, although he recognizes that there is much suffering in that section on account of short crops. The secretary is a pronounced opponent of any exercise of any paternalistic function by the government, but he is doing all that he can consistently through the department to relieve the want existing in the west. The department of agriculture will send large quantities of seeds to the stricken farmers in the spring.

Sugar Importers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Secretary Carlisle today gave a hearing to a committee of the sugar importers' association of New York on several customs questions affecting their interests. One of the questions argued was that of determining the value of imported sugars. The present law fixes an ad valorem rate, and in no case is the value of the sugar to be rated lower than the invoice price. It will be contended that in many cases the invoice price is higher than the polariscopic test would warrant. The committee asked that some uniform method of determining value be adopted.

Made a Seditious Speech.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—The grand jury today gave a hearing to a committee of the Nebraska sufferers. In Huntsville, Ala., a car load of provisions is being donated for the same purpose.

Supplies For Nebraska.

NASHVILLE, Jan. 3.—Tomorrow there will be a public meeting of citizens at the chamber of commerce to donate food supplies to the Nebraska sufferers. In Huntsville, Ala., a car load of provisions is being donated for the same purpose.

TENEMENT HOUSE FIRE.

Three Persons Suffocated by Smoke and Others Overcome.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Three persons were suffocated by smoke in a tenement house fire yesterday. The house is a 5-story tenement with four families on a floor and a Chinese laundry on the ground floor. At 1 o'clock Mrs. Schermer, the housekeeper, discovered that the place was afire and an alarm was turned in. Officer Fox was attracted by the woman's cries and rushed through the house yelling to the occupants to run for their lives. Some who wished to save their belongings had to be pushed down the stairs. The fire escaped from the front of the house were soon lined with people, frightened and white-faced, who were climbing to the street. Fox was the first to descend the ladder, carrying Lena Jacobs in his arms. Meanwhile Policemen Rooney and O'Neill had rushed to the scene and in searching the rooms found Rachel, Yetta and Joseph Jacobs lying on the floor and carried them to the street.

By the time the first engine reached the burning tenement the fire had crept up the stairway and reached the top floor. Fireman Lefore was one of the first who dragged a line of hose into the burning building. The smoke was so dense that when he got to the second floor the fireman fell, overcome, into the arms of Fireman Ruffler. The latter, with the aid of Engineer Turman, carried him to the street. The firemen, together with the Jacobs family, were taken in an ambulance to a place of safety and soon resuscitated. It was an hour and a half before the ugly blaze was extinguished. The firemen were then ordered to search the house to see that no one had been suffocated. Their first report was that no one was left in the house. An hour later the housekeeper went to the rooms of the Lehman family and discovered the dead bodies. They were not burned at all, but had been suffocated.

Strike Outlook Hopeful.

HAVERTHILL, Mass., Jan. 3.—The outlook in the strike situation is hopeful for a speedy settlement. The action of W. W. Spaulding in calling a general conference is favorably commented upon, and although it cannot be learned just what was said or done, it is generally believed that the big manufacturer has decided to accede to the demands of his employees. In view of this, the manufacturers will undoubtedly follow his example, thereby ending the strike and the disliked contract system.

Magnificent Bequest.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—The California school of mechanical arts, the last of the numerous magnificent bequests made to the public by the late James Lick, was formerly given to the people today. With brief and simple exercises the executors of the Lick estate presented the institution, together with the endowment that has been set aside for its maintenance, to the board of trustees who have been selected to manage the school. The total amount of this endowment is $450,000.

Large Order for Steel Rails.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—The Pennsylvania Railroad company has just ordered a large supply of steel rails for use in renewals and in new construction. The contracts call for the delivery of 30,000 tons of rails, and are divided between the Pennsylvania Steel company, the Edgar Thompson Steel works, the Cambria Iron company and the Scranton Steel company. It is believed that in all probability 30,000 tons more will be ordered later on.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—President R. Fulton Cutting, of the association for improving the condition of the poor, has offered to provide $10,000 to be paid to needy cloakmakers in wages of $1 a day for snow shoveling and other street work. The offer is made in a communication sent in response to the appeal issued by James R. Reynolds yesterday on behalf of the distressed cloakmakers.

FLORENCE, Colo., Jan. 3.—The richest strike ever made in the Florence oil fields has been made by the United Oil company at Coal creek, two miles from this city. AFTER TRAIN ROBBERS

Officers Held Up and Relieved of Their Weapons.

WALKED AWAY LEISURELY.

Attempt to Arrest the Macon Train Robbers Failed—Bloodhounds Secured and Put Upon the Trail—Large Posse in Pursuit—Oklahoma Desperado Killed—Other Crimes and Casualties.

MACON, Miss., Jan. 3.—Just before the arrival of the northbound train yesterday, City Marshal Scott was wired that two suspicious characters suspected of being the parties who robbed the train on the Alabama Southern railroad two nights ago near York station, were on the train and to arrest them at Macon.

He aroused Sheriff Darrah, but the train reached here before they got to the station. They met two men on the plank walk which leads to the station, but had no reason to think they were the ones wanted. Arriving at the depot Deputy United States Marshal McCune told them that the two that they met were the ones wanted. Scott and McCune got in a hack to head them off and Sheriff Darrah followed them back on the walk.

Too Much For the Officers.

Scott and McCune halted the men and what next occurred is still a mystery. One of the robbers seized Marshal McCune suddenly, disarmed him and holding him between himself and Scott, ordered the latter to throw down his gun. Scott could not fire without hitting McCune and obeyed orders. The second robber then picked up Scott's gun and halted Sheriff Darrah, who came up at that time. Scott and McCune being disarmed were powerless to do anything further. With one robber pointing his gun and the other with his pistol in his face they searched Darrah, but so hastily that they failed to find his pistol. The officers were then told to move on and be blamed quick about it.

Bloodhounds Put on the Track.

The robbers leisurely walked back toward the railroad and were not heard from afterward, having crossed the railroad bridge. Bloodhounds were wired for and have arrived from Meridian. Thirty mounted men have started out and it is expected that they will be captured.

One of the robbers was thought to be a citizen of this county who has just finished a term in the Alabama penitentiary for horse stealing in Pickens county.

Later reports say that the bloodhounds have struck the trail and are making a good run.

Desperadoes Killed.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Jan. 3.—Two star desperadoes who have infested Oklahoma territory for a long time past have been run to the ground and made to bite the dust. Before they did they fought their pursuers and seriously wounded one of them. The outlaws are Bob Moore and George East, both of whom are suspected of having been implicated in the Canadian, Tex., express robbery and the killing of Sheriff McGee. They were old offenders and their riddance was joyous news.

Asphyxiated by Gas.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—John B. Bergamini, aged 80, and his wife Kate, aged 70, were found asphyxiated by gas. Seventeen families occupied the tenement where the Bergaminis lived and the house had been filled with gas for four days. Several of the occupants had fainted during this time, and others had been forced to leave the house. When the meter examiners finally inspected the house the bodies of the Bergaminis were found. They had apparently been dead two days.

Just Breaker Captured.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 3.—Joe Dusty, colored, one of the five prisoners who escaped from jail, was captured in this city yesterday. He had a confession, implicating outsiders in the delivery. Dusty is under sentence of death for raping a young girl. When captured he made a full confession. Crowe, the Burlington train robber, he said, was the leading spirit in the plan and had been liberally supplied from the outside with money and arms.

Kneaded Into the Fire.

JOLIET, Ill., Jan. 3.—G. M. Hoadley, employed on the drainage ditch near Lockport, was killed, being struck by the handle of the cantilever and knocked several rods into a fire.

WANTED TO SEE TRAIN WRECKED.

Two Negro Boys Attempt to Wreck a Train By Placing Ties on Track.

CAMDEN, Ark., Jan. 3.—Following close on the attempt to rob the Cotton-belt express on Monday night near Buena Vista, an obstruction was placed on the track near the same spot to catch the southbound train which passes that place just after dark. A half dozen cross-ties were put on the track but, luckily, were discovered in time to flag the train. Two negro boys, 12 and 16 years old have been arrested and have confessed. They say they wanted to see a train wrecked. Fully 50 mounted men are in the country surrounding here in search of the miscreants who attempted to rob the train on Monday night.

Western Union Telegraph Company Forced to Come Down Handsome.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 3.—Robert McMullen has been accredited $25,000 damages against the Western Union Telegraph company for injuries received while working for that company as a lineman. In making some repairs McMullen grasped a live wire and was horribly burned. He fell face downward among the wires and hung suspended there. He lost an eye, his back was burned to the bone, his hands badly burned and his brain was partially paralyzed. The current came from electric light wires, which were strung on the same poles as the telegraph wires.

WAS NOT TRUE.

Rumor That Secretary Carlisle Was to Be Retired Denied.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—A report was current yesterday that J. Pierpont Morgan had called on President Cleveland and asked him to remove Secretary Carlisle, or to ask for his resignation, and that the president assured Secretary Carlisle that his feelings toward the latter remained unchanged notwithstanding the request of Mr. Morgan. When asked regarding the report, Mr. Morgan said:

"It is not true. I have not seen Mr. Cleveland in two years. There is not the slightest shadow of a foundation in the statement."

Coal Operators Meet.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 3.—A meeting of the coal operators of this district was to discuss the mining situation. No action was taken regarding the mining rate, but a resolution was passed declaring that those present were ready at any time to meet those responsible for the breaking of the Columbus agreement for the purpose of readjusting the price. It was declared that until such a meeting was held the lowest price paid at competing mines must be the ruling rate for the district.

Must Not Color Oleomargarine.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—A decision has been handed down by the full bench of the supreme court which makes the sale of oleomargarine, when colored to resemble pure butter, illegal, whether the purchaser is aware of its real character or not. The court holds that the statute did not intend to allow oleomargarine to be made or sold when so colored; that it could easily be resold to persons who could not be aware of the nature of the compound.

GREENTOWN, Ind., Jan. 3.—John Mann, along with his son, W. F. Mann, have been summoned to Fort Scott, Kan., as witnesses in a pension fraud case. Michael Mann, brother of John, was a soldier in the civil war, dying thirty years ago of a disease contracted in the army. It is now alleged that John Stockwell, residing here at the time of Mann's death, and familiar with the surrounding circumstances, secured Mann's discharge papers, removed to Kansas and there assumed the dead man's name. Several years ago he applied for a pension under the name of Michael Mann, proving his claim to the satisfaction of the department. Recently a special agent came across the name of Michael Mann on the rolls, and knowing him to be dead instituted an investigation, which resulted in the arrest of Stockwell.

STOLE 3,000 ARTICLES.

Singular Case of Kleptomania Reported From Fort Wayne.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Jan. 3.—Peter Deutschmann is under arrest for stealing exploits which cover several years, and the plunder found in his barn includes no less than 3,000 separate articles. It is alleged that Deutschmann scarcely ever left his home but that he brought back some stolen article, the police considering it one of the most singular cases of kleptomania on record. The entire collection if put up at auction would scarcely bring $50, and yet the original cost was many hundreds of dollars. Deutschmann was an old employee of the Pennsylvania railway. It does not appear that he made any effort to profit by his plunder, but he simply carried it home for the pleasure of having a collection. His plundering is said to have been going on for four years.

No competition was expected in the bidding.

REPORTS from all over Putnam county show that the many democrats who voted with the republicans in the late election had the happiest Christmas of their lives.

St. Louis is already making a play for the republican national convention next year. Chicago will probably be the city where the next president will be named, but the town cuts no figure. Putnamville would do next year.

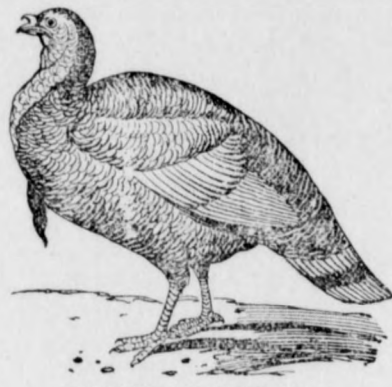

FOLLOWING up his denunciation of sleeping car companies, delivered during the Pullman strike, Senator Sherman will offer an amendment to the pooling bill to regulate sleeping car rates. Barlow Bros. Magnificent Minstrels.

Probably the largest minstrel company in the world is that headed by the famous Barlow Bros. which will visit us shortly. This splendid organization embraces more features and novel innovations than all other minstrel companies put together. Harry Ward, the famous monologue comedian, Comody and Hyland, star terpsichorean artists, the Trocadero quartette, Burk and West, Valentine and Weeks, all of whom are considered the very cleverest performers know to minstrelsy, are with the company, besides many others, whom lack of space prevents us from naming. The show is creating a furore wherever it appears.

RACCOON.

Thursday, Dec. 27, the children of Mr. R. C. Stokes gave him a holiday dinner. Covers were laid for forty-seven persons. A good many old friends were invited in, and all enjoyed the pleasant conversation which flowed, and the feast of good things that were prepared by the living children.

A few friends enjoyed a splendid dinner at Jas. Skillman's last Sunday. In the afternoon Dr. Summers and D. A. Smith furnished some good music.

At this writing Mrs. Sherman Williams is very ill.

CLOVERDALE.

G. B. Rockwell returned to Gas City Tuesday. C. K. Hughes of Greencastle accompanied him.

Sanders lodge, I. O. O. F., elected the following officers Wednesday evening: N. G., John McAvoy; V. G., Wm. Hughes; sec., W. Pickens; treas., T. Brown.

They Don't Attend in Parke.

The Parke county poultry show was a failure financially. The Republican says: The poultry show was a clear failure so far as attendance was concerned, although it was as fine an exhibit of splendid fowls as was ever got together in the state. But for some reason not known—probably chiefly because of the season—the people did not care to see fine poultry. By aid of a contribution of the business men and the scaling of bills, wherever persons were willing to do so, the association was able to clear up all running expenses, but it comes out considerably in the hole on the exhibit. No premiums (except specials) were paid and exhibitors have only their ribbons to show for their trouble.

An Explosive Family.

A woman named Roleum named her twin girls Gasoline and Kerosene and they are fine girls. The man's name is Peter Roleum, and the man who marries into the family will probably strike oil, but it is intimated that sparking in that neighborhood will be dangerous pastime. It is related that a man named Naptha popped the question to one of the girls and has not "ben zine" since.—Exchange.

Health, Appetite and Strength Renewed by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: "Hood's Sarsaparilla is splendid. I had long been troubled with erysipelas, and three times had it in my head and face. I became nearly blind and my hair all came out. My husband wished me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I only took three bottles before

I was free from my old-time trouble and long suffering. It has never returned until last winter while I was ill with the grip, a slight attack broke out on my face. After my sickness I was not well, became easily tired and lost my appetite. I resumed taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and am now using the fourth bottle and can run up and down stairs as spry as ever. The tired feeling is gone and I have a good appetite." Mrs. Wm. E. Baringer, Olive Ridge, New York.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills, biliousness, jaundice, indigestion, sick headache.

Grave Questions.

To the Editor BANNER TIMES:

The grave questions confronting us involving difficult problems that ought to be solved, and must be if the highest good of all is served. "Tramps" are on the increase, and are recruited from the multitudes of the uncultured and unemployed; hence, how to provide against boys becoming tramps, one of the problems. A great truism is "We reap what we sow," in kind, but in a wonderfully increased ratio, especially out on the lines of evil.

Another truism is, "That preventive is better and more economic than cure." Now I ask, is our treatment of the class out of which tramps are evolved, such as to increase or diminish the number, of these leaches on general society? Which is better, to let the law have its course in petty offences or give the offender a few days to leave town, thus giving him time to mature his plans and effect his meanness into other communities.

It is a charity to supply the needs of the helpless poor, but is it charity to give to the poor indiscriminately? Would not the primary principles of man and womanhood be better instilled and the tendency to the tramp be lessened by providing the able-bodied boy and girl with work whereby they may earn their food and raiment by honest toil?

Gambling among street boys especially is alarmingly on the increase, and will continue to increase until municipal authorities united with the home rule insist on the rigid enforcement of law that will prevent boys and girls from being on the streets after certain hours without proper attendants.

Now if these reforms ever bless society in the measure they ought to meet out, it must come through the united effort of the well-to-do and cultured classes. There are three things in the way of progress on these lines, viz: laziness, cowardice and parsimony. It is easier to give $10 to meet the immediate demand than to provide home and industrial schools for the homeless and ignorant that would demand constant care; but is it either economy or true philanthropy? I was once talking with a justice of the peace (not in Greencastle) in the front of his place of business; seeing there was to be a "row" in front of a saloon across the way, he had immediate business in the back part rather than do his duty as an officer of the law, for fear of his official head. I have known the best class of business men to withhold their name in the furtherance of reform for fear of being boycotted by the saloon element. Suppose the anti-saloon element were to play the same game. It is estimated that 5000 children have been arrested this year at a cost to tax-payers of $100,000. This sum would go far toward providing against the necessity for these arrests.

Ours is a rule for the people and by the people; can we do our duty as citizens and philanthropists until we unite our force with the city authorities in the enforcement of a law that will keep children off the streets after certain hours? A letter is before me from the mayor of an adjoining city who closes with the following, "I am of the opinion that there should be an ordinance in every city, and should be thoroughly enforced, compelling boys and girls who are not accompanied by some one to be off the street at nine o'clock every night, which ordinance I recommend to your council."

This is to give notice that I have purchased the music business of E. Marquis, 17 S. Indiana street, and will conduct the business in the future at the old stand individually.

I am making a marvelous showing in the way of PIANOS. I am showing you the soft side of hard times by offering good square Pianos from $25 to $75 and new upright Pianos from $200 upward. And then I am giving much for little again in the Small Goods and Sheet Music department. One-fourth off on Guitars, Violins, Accordions, Banjos, Harps and other Musical Merchandise—Auto-harps, popular, easy to play and easy to buy. Music, instrumental and vocal, at 3 cents a copy. THE DEPAUW TRUSTEES.

Annual Midwinter Session in this City on Wednesday, Jan. 2.

The trustees of DePauw university held their midwinter meeting yesterday in east college. There was an unusually large attendance of the members, who manifested an earnest desire to do the best possible for the university. Wilson Morrow resigned his position as secretary of the board, and George L. Curtiss was elected to fill the vacancy. The investing committee was constituted as follows:

N. T. DePauw, C. C. Binkley, John Poucher, George L. Curtiss and E. B. Rawls. In the investment of funds this committee is bound by most rigid business methods. The chief matter under consideration was the financial condition and outlook. A decided forward step was taken. The president recommended in his report that an immediate effort be made for the increase of the endowment and that plans be devised for raising a half million dollars for that purpose before the close of the nineteenth century. The university has in former times taken advantage of epochal periods for the increase of its funds, and the closing years of the century will furnish an epoch of singular prominence and interest. A committee of five with President John as chairman was appointed to report definite plans at the next meeting of the board, which will be held in April. The friends of the university will be gratified at this important movement, and it is confidently believed that the alumni, patrons and supporters of the institution will gladly respond and crown the close of the century with this magnificent achievement.

By CHARLES B. LEWIS (M. QUAD).

(Copyright, 1894, by Charles B. Lewis.)

In the spring of 1859 the English brig Tempest, bound from Liverpool to Valparaiso, met her fate in a singular manner when her voyage was almost completed. One afternoon when we were driving along at the rate of eight knots per hour and all was going well the brig was suddenly lifted almost out of water, and there was a crash and a smash which told of irreparable damage to her bottom. The idea with everybody was that we had struck a derelict or a floating tree, but after a minute a whale fully 50 feet rose to the surface close alongside, and it was plain that he had struck the ship. We had a cargo of light goods, or the brig would have gone down like a stone. As it was, we had only ten minutes to get clear of her. When she went down, she listed over to port, and we saw that 20 feet of her keel had been broken off and a score of planks crushed and splintered. About sundown we were picked up by a coaster and two days later were landed at Valparaiso.

I had been in port for a couple of weeks and was about to ship on a Scotch craft when I fell in with Captain Enos Strong of New Bedford. He was part owner of a small bark named the Curlew and had been lying in the port for six weeks waiting for a charter. Three days before I met him he had decided to go up the coast to Callao, but 24 hours later had reason to change his mind. There had come aboard of his craft at night a native woman about 40 years of age who had disguised herself as a man. She was a servant in the family of General Mendoza, the richest and most powerful family, with two exceptions, in Chile. Three years previously the general, who was then 65 years old, had married in Spain, his bride being the daughter of a rich and influential man at the capital.

The bride was only 17 years of age at the time and had been allowed no voice in the affair. As a matter of course, she hated and detested the general, and after living with him for three years had conceived a bold and startling plan. Her trusted servant had come aboard of the Curlew to arrange with Captain Strong, if possible, to carry off the wife and a couple of servants and her belongings. She didn't want to return to Spain, but would go to England or the United States. If Captain Strong was afraid of complications, he might land her in the West Indies, Mexico or even on an island in midocean. The general's young wife had boxes of jewelry and bags of gold, and if Captain Strong would consent to take her away he could name his own price.

Ninety-nine men out of a hundred would have promptly refused to enter upon such an adventure, but Captain Strong as promptly declared that he would carry the general's wife to the north pole if she paid his price.

The offer was accepted and plans discussed that same night, and it was because Captain Strong was looking for a picked crew that I encountered him, or even knew of his presence in Valparaiso. He told me nothing whatever about his scheme. On the contrary, he rattled off a yarn about having been hired to carry off two political prisoners who were under sentence of death. The crew were to receive double pay, ask no questions and do no talking.

In the course of three days he picked up a crew to his liking. Five men would have been a fair crew for the bark, but he had engaged nine of us. On the day we were to sail he brought aboard 20 muskets and a lot of ammunition, and ship carpenters were at work all day in the cabin. A dozen things occurred to make every man aboard realize that we were to enter upon a mysterious and perhaps dangerous voyage, but the offer of double wages silenced all inquiry or discussion. One afternoon the Curlew cleared for Callao in ballast, and at 10 o'clock in the evening, just as the tide was ready to serve and while we lay at anchor in the harbor, three men came aboard—that is, the two or three of us to castle hands who assisted them in board and afterward handled their luggage supposed them to be men. They disappeared into the cabin at once.

While I got my particulars by piecemeal, I am going to give you the story as a whole. The three men, of course, turned out to be the runaway wife and her two servants. While the general had gone to some distant point and was out of the way entirely they had disguised themselves to escape detection in passing through the city. The Mendoza residence was three miles from the bay, and the women had come down through the southern outskirts of the town, followed by their baggage cart, and been pulled off to us by fishermen who were told that they were political conspirators flying to escape the country.

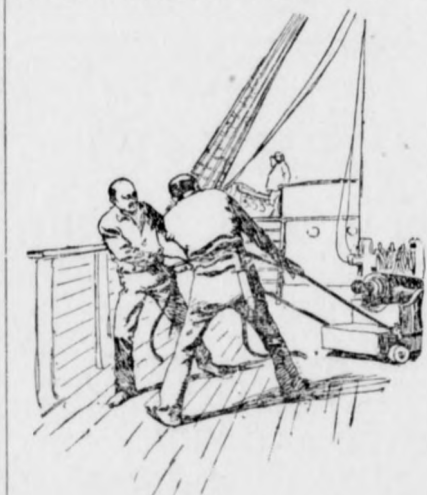

As the women got away from the house without being detected, and as the fisherman could be depended on to keep silence, Captain Strong flattered himself that he had made a good start.

We were off as soon as the people were aboard, and on getting our offing the brig's head was pointed to the south instead of the north. There was no reason to fear pursuit before the general returned to find his wife gone, and he was not expected back for a week. However, daylight had no sooner come than Captain Strong had all at work to disguise the bark. Her hull had been painted white as she lay in port. We got out the pots and brushes and gave her a coat of jet black, and before night she was the Albatross of Liverpool. She had been furnished with new sails at Valparaiso. We unbent these and bent on her old suit, and such other changes were made aloft and aloft as to make her look altogether a different craft from the Curlew. Captain Strong's foresight in thus overhauling the bark saved us from capture before we even suspected danger.

General Mendoza must have returned the morning after his wife's flight, or when his servants found her missing and gave the alarm some of his friends must have taken prompt measures to overhail her. I have never solved that point, but I do know that fishermen gave information which led to pursuit. A tugboat was dispatched to the north and a government steamer to the south, and it was with this latter we had to do. At sundown on our first day out the wind died away, and during the night we did not make ten miles. Next day the breeze was light and headed us, and we were almost standing still when the steamer was hove up astern.

Captain Strong had no reason to believe that he was pursued, but he did not propose to take any chances. He was wearing full whiskers and a big mustache. As soon as the steamer was sighted he went to his cabin and shaved his face clean, and the change was so great that his own wife would have passed him by on the street. The first mate, who had been aboard Valparaiso for several weeks, also wielded the razor, and a sailor named Thompson and myself were called aft, told to dress up in suits belonging to the mates and play the part of passengers. We had two hours to arrange our plans, and no one apprehended any danger when the steamer overhauled us and requested that we lie to while she sent a boat aboard. The three women were locked in their staterooms, every piece of baggage hidden from sight, and the naval lieutenant who boarded us found the men at work on the rigging, the two passengers smoking the captain's cigars on the quarter deck and nothing whatever to excite suspicion. He was polite, but to tell the truth he was also a liar. He claimed to be after the Curlew because she had given passage to several political outlaws, and he did not even hint at the flight of General Mendoza's wife. What he wanted of us was information, but of course Captain Strong had none to give.

The lieutenant was invited into the cabin to partake of a glass of wine, and when he pulled off for the steamer he was profuse in his apologies for the delay he had caused. While aboard of us he claimed to be able to identify Captain Strong on sight and added that half the crew of the steamer could tell the Curlew a league distant. As soon as he reached his craft he turned about and steamed to the south, and when hull down the three women came on deck for the first time. The older one was a relative and companion, the younger a maid. The general's wife was not a handsome woman, as we of the fo'castle decided, but both her face and ways were pleasant, and when we came to hear the whole yarn, which reached us in fragments through the steward and cook, it was unanimously decided that we would see her in a safe port or die trying.

The promptness of the pursuit greatly alarmed the runaway wife and put Captain Strong up to new ideas. General Mendoza had the money and influence to make a long chase and a hot one. Aside from the two government craft at Valparaiso when we left, there were a dozen or more merchantmen which he could hire to scour the seas, and there was no doubt of further pursuit. At nightfall the wind veered to the west and blew fresh, and as we held our course to the south captain, mates and the women were consulting and planning. Early next morning the old sails were sent down one after another and the new ones bent on. When this job had been completed, we got out the paint pots and changed the color from black to a drab and the name from the Albatross to the Princess. In a couple of days we had completed the transformation and were satisfied that if boarded again by the same lieutenant he could not feel certain he had ever stepped foot on our decks.

Before sailing farther I must tell you what happened at Valparaiso. Six different craft left that port in pursuit of us, three going to the north and three to the south. Of the three in our wake two were dull sailers and were never sighted. The third, an English brig named the Chatham, was a fast craft, and her captain seemed to scent our trail from the start. Twenty armed men were put aboard of her before she left, and having the benefit of fresh winds, while we were scarcely making headway, she was sighted astern just as we were opposite Cape St. Antonio. Every one aboard suspected her to be in pursuit, and then and there began an ocean chase lasting for weeks and covering thousands of miles of distance.

One day when we were down almost to the Horn it fell calm. The Chatham was not more than three miles astern when the wind died away. We looked for the Englishman to get out his boats and pay us a visit, and after waiting half a day he decided to pursue that plan. Two boats filled with men put off to overhail us, and we had made every preparation to give them a warm reception, and they were within a mile of us, when a breeze suddenly sprang up, and we got a long start of the brig. When fairly off the Horn, we got a westerly gale, before which we scudded for six hours and then had to lie to. As we ran before it the brig got within a mile of us, but as we were up and drifted to the east for 30 hours we lost sight of her for the first time. Gale and sea had only abated sufficiently for us to resume our course, however, when the Englishman picked up our trail again and resumed his old position. It was plain that he could not overhail us in any sort of weather, and his only hope was in our meeting with some accident. If not that, then he intended to follow us until we made port somewhere.

When opposite Staten island, with a dark and tempestuous night coming down, we made as if we would pass through the strait of Magellan and then wore ship and ran to the south for 30 miles. We thought we had fooled the Englishman for sure that time, but when daylight broke he was half a mile nearer to us than he had been for a week before.

When the bark came about, with her head to the northeast, there was an overhauling of water and provisions. An extra quantity had been laid in before leaving Valparaiso, but we were at once put on half rations, and Captain Strong announced that he would make no port until he reached the coast of America. Now we stretched away for the long run, and hours made days, and days ran into weeks. Day after day the brig followed on in our wake, sometimes gaining and sometimes losing, but never closing the gap. Three or four times we lost her entirely, or rather she lost us, but only for a few hours.

Captain Strong worked every scheme suggested to shake the Englishman off, but none of them proved successful. He was with us in storm or calm, when scudding or lying to. One day we lost our foremast. This would have given him the advantage, but it wasn't five minutes before he had two or three sails blown away, and matters were evened up. When opposite Cape St. Roque, we laid a straight course for the Cape de Verde islands, but when night came shifted our helm and held to the northwest for the Caribbean sea. When morning came, the brig was out of sight, but at 3 o'clock in the afternoon she picked us up again and even gained half a mile. She clung to us all the way up the coast and into the gulf of Paria, but there she met her fate. One dark night she was run into by a steamer and sent to the bottom, with all hands, though we heard nothing of it for weeks afterward.

The runaway wife and her maids were landed in Jamaica, where the voyage ended for the crew as well, and after a few months they went to the United States and for a time resided in New York. What ultimately became of them I am not certain, but it was said they returned to Spain, and the wife found shelter with her parents.

Mexico's Mineral Wealth.

The number of mines now being worked in Mexico, according to recent data, is at least 3,600, with others worked only at intervals, and others still whose operations are hardly worthy of mention. If to these are added the large number of abandoned claims, many of which, if reopened, would yield important returns, even greater in some cases than those now in course of development, the total would reach, according to our chief informant, "incredible figures," while new mines are being discovered day by day.

The total amount invested in the silver mines of Mexico is roughly estimated at $160,000,000, of which not more than one-eighth is American capital, while only an amount equal to one-third of the latter, or $6,500,000, is British capital. The annual yield of Mexican silver and gold collectively is set down at about $8,500,000. The output of copper figures at about $500,000 and of iron at $800,000, if we include iron, sulphur, marble, clay, mercury, salt, stone and metalloids, the estimated annual total of mining products would amount to not less than $13,400,000.—Westminster Review.

A Marriage Song.

Sweet be the stars that glimmer
Above your path of life;
Sweet be the faith and glory;
Sweet be the dear old story.
Ah, love, dear love, forever
Shield these two hearts from strife!

O love, thy sacred meaning
Is in the faith divine
That binds two souls together;
That binds through sunny weather
And through the falling darkness
Truth's majesty as thine!

O time, dost thou not cherish
What men do cherish still?
Day's radiance softly covers
The steadiest faith of lovers.
Life's tender blossoms bloom
Where souls have learned to thrill.

O time, dost thou not cherish
The union born for time?
No love is meant to sunder.
True love is love whose wonder
Grows lovelier with the ages,
Forever in its prime.

Ah, ye who now are treading
Where older souls have trod,
List to the deeper teaching
Of life, far deeper, far-reaching;
List to the hopes sublime
That bloom in man and God.

Sweet be the years whose brightness
Swells through the glad today!
Sweet be the life ye cling to;
Sweet be the faith ye sing to;
Sweet be the truth ye follow;
Sweet be the prayers ye pray!

THE TOILET TABLE.

IT HAS SUPERSEDED THE BUREAU IN FASHIONABLE BOUDOIRS.

Prevailing Styles in Furniture Appear in the New Dressing Tables—The Duchess Table Remains in Favor—Novelties in Covers—Toilet Articles in Abundance.

In these days milady's toilet table is as much a part of her existence as the daily papers or the latest fashion in frocks. The bureau's reign is over, and that most useful if not ornamental piece of furniture may be banished for seven years, the usual time, to some garret or storeroom, while chiffoniers and dressing tables take its place. The toilet table need not be part and parcel of the set of bedroom furniture, but it is now counted as one of the essential pieces thereof. It can be and often is a unique piece, a veritable curiosity, an heirloom. In every shape and form and of every description of wood is it fashioned—empire, the various Louises, the colonial and all the many styles. Even the old fashioned duchess table, so dear to the heart of the amateur carpenter, has been revived. The duchess table possesses many attractions for people whose purses are not so wide as their tastes. It can be made of a kitchen table and a dozen yards, more or less, of white muslin and colored cambric. If a kitchen table is not procurable, a barrel sawed in half lengthwise, with a flat board nailed thereon, makes a capital foundation. This sort of dressing table while it is fresh is exceedingly pretty.

The mahogany and the whitewood tables are beautiful. They are quite low, with swinging mirror, at just the right height for a woman to see how to arrange her hair while sitting down. The colonial styles with rounded out sides are extremely good and admit of unlimited outlay in wood, workmanship and brass ornamentation. Some of these tables have candle rests at both sides of the mirror, so that by day or night a proper light can be secured.

The woman who thinks an ordinary bureau and a brush and comb are quite sufficient for her daily needs, would hardly credit it were she told all that the up to date woman who arranges her hair at a dressing table considers necessary to enable her to perform such a feat. Silver, ebony, tortoise shell, ivory and rare china are used for the brushes, combs, hand mirrors, buttonhooks, etc.

Quite a new thing is to have the table covered with a thick piece of beveled plate glass put over the embroidered toilet cover. It seems just a trifle hard and cold, but looks very well. The ivory and tortoise shell sets have the serious disadvantage of not standing well our climate. The tortoise shell cracks very easily, and the glass in the ivory hand mirrors snaps constantly, owing to the contraction of the ivory in the changes of climate. Silver is the most useful of anything. Embroidered covers for these tables are handsome. The white linen, cut in points and buttonholed in colored flosselle, is effective and shows off the ornaments best. Dotted muslins and lace should be reserved for the duchess tables with their draperies.

At the secondhand furniture dealer's can often be found veritable old mahogany dressing tables, which, after being scraped and polished, are as handsome as the modern ones, in many instances much handsomer. The garrets of old New England houses have been pretty well ransacked the last few years by collectors of antique furniture, but dressing tables have only recently been the craze, so there are undoubtedly still treasures to be found.

For country houses, where elaborate furnishing is out of place and where daintiness and freshness should by rights take the place of richness of wood and carving, the duchess tables in such rooms are handsomer than those of wood. A country room furnished in cretonne, with dressing table covered with the same and curtains of flowered chintz, is extremely pretty. The ordimary pine wood table makes a capital foundation, and a half round of wood is good to tack the side curtains to, although some prefer the straight brass rod to hang them over. The mirror for this sort of table can be of the plainest description if the frame be covered, but the handsome old fashioned gilt ones are allowable, says the writer of the foregoing in The Housewife.

It Is Denied.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The report that J. Pierpont Morgan had called on President Cleveland to urge the removal of Secretary Carlisle from the cabinet is emphatically denied in official circles and by the very best authority. It is stated in most decisive terms that the president has not seen Mr. Morgan for more than a year.

Products of the Mint.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—A statement issued by the director of the mint shows the coinage executed at the mints of the United States during December to have been $3,456,693, of which $2,072,042 was gold; $1,270,028 silver and $114,593 minor coins. Of the silver coined $250,341 was in standard dollars.

Arrested for Burglary.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 3.—Five tramps were arrested at Springfield Junction, suspected of robbing the store of Hugh McRoberts and the postoffice at Curran Saturday night. An examination showed that they were wearing part of the underclothing stolen from the store.

Not Satisfied With the Wage Cut.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Jan. 3.—There has been much dissatisfaction over the cut in wages here in the mills, and the trouble is said to have ended in a strike in the 119 inch mill. One of the men, at the end of a turn, found that under the new scale, he had earned just 30 cents for the turn. He told his fellow workers and all of them, 200, are said to have walked out of the works. Everything is quiet so far and no trouble is feared.

Clothing Caught Fire.

MILAN, Mo., Jan. 3.—Lum Crooks, who left here with his family for the southern part of this state, traveling in a wagon, camped eight miles south of this place yesterday. While his wife was getting supper her clothes caught fire and she was fatally burned. Two of her little daughters caught hold of her and were badly burned. Crooks was also injured while trying to extinguish the flames.

Failed to Find Her Husband.

KOKOMO, Ind., Jan. 3.—Mrs. Ollie Sallenberger has returned from Philadelphia, where she spent several weeks vainly searching for her husband, John Sallenberger, who mysteriously disappeared 16 months ago. He was a salesman for a Philadelphia house and was last seen at Baltimore, Md., Sept. 7, 1893. He was a prominent K. of P. and Mason and of excellent family. The young wife, who has two small children, is heartbroken.
